Purpose, provision and the power of prayer

YOUR PRAYERS AND MESSAGES FOR DANIELA AND HER FAMILY HAVE BEEN 'LIKE A HUG FROM GOD'

Four years ago, we introduced you to Daniela from Colombia. Her father, Plinio, was killed for sharing the gospel in an area controlled by gangs. As she's wrestled in prayer and seen God at work through her suffering, her faith has emerged stronger.

"Back then, I was drowning in sadness," Daniela recalls. "I remember crying almost every night and asking God: 'Why my family and no others?'"

For years, she questioned God, until one day she got an answer.

In 2024, the family attended an event with a group from Germany, who were on a trip sponsored by Open Doors. A woman prayed for her and her brother, Sebastián. "Maybe God allowed this to protect your dad's future," she offered.

For Daniela, the words prompted a profound shift in perspective. "Maybe this was God's mercy for him," she shares.

That same night, something else happened. The group gave Daniela and her brother a pamphlet that had their faces on it. "They told me they use it to share the gospel with children and show them that, despite difficulties, it's worth following Jesus. They said that my story was impacting millions of lives."

Seeing purpose in her pain, a weight lifted. Daniela also saw how important it is to persevere in prayer, knowing that if she'd given up, she might never have discovered what God was doing through her story. "If we don't remain firm, we may never know why. We won't know what God holds for our future," she says.

Another wonderful answer to prayer soon followed.

After graduating from high school, Daniela dreamed of studying graphic design, but it was unaffordable for the family. "Believe in God," her mother encouraged her. "He will provide."

That's what happened when Open Doors local partners offered to fund the course. "I knew it was God Himself. God paid for my studies," says Daniela, who now works as a graphic designer.

Many of you also wrote letters to the family. Some are pinned to Daniela's wall. "Open Doors was like a hug from God, showing me that He was there. They are little messages from God that He sends through people."

"Now the Lord is my everything."

Losing her father changed Daniela's life forever, but it's not had the final word.

"Of course, there are times when I miss him. But now, it's more about remembering with joy what I had. He is with God. Now the Lord is my everything. He knows how to show me His love."

PLEASE PRAY

- Praise God for how He's met with Daniela in her suffering
- That she will thrive in her vocation and faith
- For continued healing, comfort and strength for the whole family.

SOWING HOPE IN NIGERIA

Reverend Markus Bambo has seen the lives of people in his community transformed by your support

Because of your generosity, Christian farmers in Nigeria are experiencing fresh hope through the support of Open Doors local partners. Thank you!

For many of our brothers and sisters in Nigeria, it isn't just attacks from extremists that they fear, but the growing isolation that comes from within their own communities.

"When it comes to employment, Muslims are always given priority," says Reverend Markus Bambo. "For example, if they are picking ten people, they might just consider one Christian out of the ten after considering their own people."

Rev. Bambo lives with a community of believers in Kanam Local Government Area (LGA), Plateau State, where Muslims make up most of the population. Christians are often treated as second-class citizens and are denied privileges that their Muslim peers enjoy – including the provision of vital products needed for farming, an essential livelihood for many citizens.

"This has completely shown that Christians in other parts of the world are concerned about us."

When government subsidies for fertilisers and insecticides are distributed, local partners state that Muslim communities receive over 90% of these items, leaving Christians with little or nothing. The subsidised items are then often sold to believers at exorbitant rates, driving whole communities deeper into poverty.

In the face of these growing challenges, Open Doors local partners stepped in to provide three days of skill-building sessions for 100 Christian farmers in Kanam LGA. Following training, the farmers were each given a loan of two bags of fertiliser, herbicides and a knapsack to be shared between two farmers. For many, these provisions went beyond equipping the community – it was a timely reminder of their global church family standing with them despite the marginalisation they are experiencing.

"We are sidelined, we have been cheated, oppressed and seen as nothing, but you have brought support to us that will help us spiritually and build our faith and physical body. We thank God and thank you again," Rev. Bambo expresses. "The fertiliser and herbicide have really helped our farms. Since we started using these items, we have seen the blessings of God on our farms and from what we can see, our yield this year will be more than last year.

"We thank God and the ministry and ask God to bless you. This has completely shown that Christians in other parts of the world are concerned about us."

PLEASE PRAY

- Praise God for His generous provision to our brothers and sisters in Kanam LGA
- That the beneficiaries of the training will have wisdom and perseverance as they work
- For the Lord's protection and blessing over the community and farms.

Esther: my mum's story

Stories live on through the words of one generation to another. Esther, a young girl, listens to her mother's stories about Christians in Iran, longing for the day when they can share her freedom.

Esther* watches her mother, Mary, walk in, carefully carrying a tray with a teapot and cups. It's a rhythm of life which enables them to share memories as well as tea.

Esther is 12, old enough to understand that the stories her mother tells her aren't fairytales. Mary describes her home in Iran, the place she fled when she was just 17.

"I cherish this time with my children," Mary says. "I share with them stories about our house church, how we sang songs in low voices, how we were thirsty to learn more about Jesus."

But she doesn't skip the harder parts – how persecution grew so much that her family had to flee. "Both my grandfather and father were taken when secret agents raided the house," Mary remembers.

"This reality still exists in Iran today," Esther says. "I pray for them."

Her family continues to serve Christians inside Iran through online ministry. They hope that eventually they'll be able to return home. "I want my kids to pray for Christians in Iran and to appreciate what they have now," Mary shares. "I also want them to hope that, one day, we will all be able to go and worship Jesus there."

Esther wrote a poem imagining Mary's experience, and drew a picture (ABOVE) to express their shared longing, looking forward to a day when she can worship with believers from her mother's homeland.

Today, I leave the place I've always known,
The house where I was born,
Where I took my first steps,
And where silence now speaks louder than love.

You might wonder, Why run?
Why abandon the soil that raised me?
But listen, and I will tell you why...

It began months ago,
When the government turned cold against us,
Against Christians.
Now, belief is a crime,
And faith can set your home in flames.

It happened to another Mary once.
My name is Mary, too.
In Iran, it's not an uncommon name.
But in times like these,
It carries the weight of danger.
School offers no refuge.
My sister and I are the only Christians
In a sea of silence and scorn.
At our all-Muslim school,
We are mocked, shamed,
Treated as strangers
In the land of our birth.
And when the day is over,
There is no comfort waiting.
We return to a home missing its heart.

Only one parent greets us now
And not always.
Our father is gone again.
Perhaps arrested,
Perhaps worse.
His only crime:
Handing out Bibles, sharing the
Word that gives us strength.

So today, I run.
Not from love,
Not from memory,
But from fear.

Today, I leave to survive.
